Handling and Teaching Collection

The SRU Library has a collection of ethnographic objects and artworks from Oceania, Africa and the Americas for use in teaching. Anyone is welcome to view items and handle the teaching collection. If you wish to know more about the collection or arrange a viewing please email sru.library@uea.ac.uk. These items are kept onsite but in storage, so they will need to be requested in advance.

Ask at the Enquiry Desk for further details.

Film and Video Collection

The SRU Library contains VHS and DVD resources, including a limited number of commercial films as well as off-air recordings with an ethnographic focus. The majority of the film and video material in the Library is for UEA teaching and research purposes only, but requested material can be viewed using one of the SRU Library networked PCs (headphones are available).

UEA staff and students also have access to Box of Broadcasts and 'Ethnographic Video Online, Vol. 3 Indigenous Voices' from the Main Library's subscriptions.

Special Collections

The SRU has built up a small collection of hard-to-find and rare titles. Acquired by purchase and through donations, these titles provide invaluable primary resource material. The collection includes works of discovery and exploration, particularly from the 18th and 19th centuries. These texts can offer insight into early encounters between cultures. Highlights include Richard Hakluyt's Principal navigations of 1599-1600 and Cook's Atlas, 1785.

A small number of high-quality facsimiles are also held in the SRU Library's Special Collections, including pictorial manuscripts from Mesoamerica such as the Codex Borbonicus.

Special Collection items are distinguished in the catalogue by the terms 'SRU Special Collection - Reference' or 'SRU Store Special Collection'.

Please ask at the Enquiry Desk to access these items.
